Abstract

Curtis Jr (2018) restates theories Individual Leisure Theory, with Price-Adjustments, for Individuals in Capital Markets, and Individual Returns to Accumulation vs. Latent Systems, with considerations of Expected Returns, Information & Market Clearing and how Graduate Program degree candidates and universities can increase higher education market efficiency with effective form administration through enhancing i. admissions administration, ii. degree administration, iii. employment administration, and iv. publishing administration.

Keywords: applied economics education, financial economics, human capital theory

1. Introduction

Curtis Jr (2018) applies administration and graduate program degree candidates to a market clearing condition, using economic and finance theory from Curtis Jr (2017) to show the decision-making processes of an individual dividing time between higher education knowledge and wisdom accumulation and leisure. James Curtis Jr also shows university officials and executives the decision-making processes of individuals dividing their time between leisure, and financial endowment management and growth.
